The 6-point CV checklist.

Recruiters decide in seconds whether to read your CV properly. Tick every box before you hit apply.

01 Strongest proof in the top third

- [ ] No objective statement
- [ ] Education line, then your best internship, project or achievement
- [ ] Hobbies and school marks moved down or removed

02 Results, not responsibilities

- [ ] Every bullet follows: action + what you did + result
- [ ] A number wherever you honestly can (or scale, or a clear outcome)

BEFORE
Handled social media for the college fest.

AFTER
Ran Instagram for the college fest; grew followers from 800 to 3,200 in six weeks.

03 Tailored to the job description

- [ ] Underlined the skills and words the job description repeats
- [ ] The same words appear in your CV, inside bullets that prove them

04 Easy for software to read

- [ ] One column, standard headings: Education, Experience, Projects, Skills
- [ ] No tables, text boxes, icons or skill bars for important content
- [ ] Saved as PDF, named Firstname-Lastname-CV.pdf

05 Projects beat coursework

- [ ] At least one project described: the problem, what you built or did, the tools, what happened
- [ ] No long list of every subject you studied

06 One page, proof one click away

- [ ] Fits on one page; anything that doesn't support the role is cut
- [ ] LinkedIn (and GitHub or portfolio, where relevant) linked
- [ ] LinkedIn tells the same story as the CV

The 10-second test. Hand your CV to a friend for ten seconds, then take it back. Ask what you're good at and what role you want. If they can't answer both, fix the top of your CV.
